

Guest Lecture by Rory Loughnane
(University of Kent)
General Editor of *The Oxford Marlowe
Project*

Friday 8th December, 2pm to 3.45pm

For the Zoom invitation, please email
sophie.battell@es.uzh.ch

The Christopher Marlowe Project aims to conduct research into the shape and boundaries of the Marlowe canon, the social and cultural forces and collaborative practices that shaped his identity and works, and the performance history and reception of his writings from his period to our own.

Rory Loughnane is Reader in Early Modern Studies and Co-Director of The Centre for Medieval and Early Modern Studies at the University of Kent.